2.00 pm to 4.00 pm

Home Science Association of India

The Home Science Association of India (HSAI) was established in 1950 with its headquarters in The Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda, Vadodara. Since then the association has grown in stature and has established several state branches with more than 2500 members. The major aim of the association is to promote the welfare of the family to raise the technical competence and standards of profession in the field of Home Science and allied subjects. It explores the plausibility of the establishment of the perfections in the social orders starting from home life to the community level.

The HSAI has been at the forefront of this advocacy and documents how to improve lives and livelihoods while not sacrificing the sustainability of the environment.

It has showcased several actions that promote learning from diverse regional variations, promote fundamental educational values, embed sustainable development considerations in research and in the curriculum, adopt considerations of sustainability in leadership practices and underline Social responsibility in outreach at home and in their state partnerships.

Concept of the Webinar

Home science is a discipline which offers opportunities to young women to take up career in the different dimensions of Family and Community Science. This webinar will serve as a knowledge sharing platform and throw light on recent studies and developments in the field of Home Science.
